4. Only a few of the leading professors in medicine remained in Latvia. Among them was Dr Stradinsh, a leading surgeon. He was working mostly in the university clinics and hospital which was located in one of the western suburbs of Riga near the so-called Agenskalns and the railway station Sasulauks which is on the opposite side of the Daugava River from all the other university buildings. The department of biology was located in another building on Alberta Street which is not far from the building of medicine and the laboratory building already mentioned.
